Training seminar description

The Global Sustainable Tourism Council (GSTC) and the Institute of Tourism (ITW) of the Lucerne School of Business are jointly offering a 2.5-day training seminar from 19.02.-21.02.2020.

The planned training pursues an innovative learning approach by presenting and applying the Global Sustainable Tourism Criteria (GSTC Criteria) for both destinations and companies (hotel and tour operators) in a life-case scenario in cooperation with Schwyz Tourism. The participants gain new theoretical impulses and insights and can apply them to specific circumstances in their destinations. The training incorporates a high degree of interaction among the participants and with the stakeholders and decision-makers of the destination.

Participants will have the opportunity to develop concrete sustainability measures within the framework of the life-case, which take into account the circumstances of the partner destination and could subsequently be implemented.

Detailed description

This 2.5-day training will be delivered in English and is aimed at professionals in the travel and tourism industry, including representatives of tourism destinations, entrepreneurs and other organizations/institutions interested in sustainability and concrete implementation of sustainability measures.

The special feature of the training is the close cooperation with the partner destination Schwyz Tourismus. The participants gain deeper insights into the challenges as well as success factors in the implementation of sustainability measures, taking into account the GSTC criteria and standards.

The training covers tourism as a tool for sustainable development, best practice examples of sustainability and the GSTC criteria, the world's leading standard for tourism sustainability, as well as key issues such as global trends in sustainable tourism, sustainability marketing and the development and management of tourism products. This training is part of the GSTC Sustainable Tourism Training Program \(STTP\).

Highlights:

- Knowledge and expertise representing the GSTC as the global authority on quality sustainable tourism standards.
- Stimulating and rewarding learning experience, being part of an interactive training with fellow participants representing a variety of public, private, academic and non-profit entities.
- Practical insights on promoting sustainable and responsible travel experiences in a real destination through case studies and best practice examples.
- Learn to prioritize and make informed decisions about how to implement sustainability practices in companies and destinations.
- Learn about the role of accreditation and certification to advance and establish sustainability across the tourism industry.

How will the training benefit your work? Why should you take part in the training?

- First training course in Switzerland.
- Exchange with like-minded people about sustainability.
- Discuss how you can incorporate sustainability (even more) into your day-to-day. Be a pioneer and best practice yourself. Especially in the context of intensive "climate discussions" from the schools, we should let deeds follow.
- You will gain an in-depth knowledge of the GSTC Criteria, the baseline standard for sustainability in travel and tourism.
- You will be able to make informed decisions on how to implement sustainability practices for your company or destination.
- You will be able to build and establish viable and actionable sustainable tourism policies and practices for your organization.
- You will have the opportunity to participate in the official GSTC Sustainable Tourism Training Program (STTP) Exam, and upon successful completion, receive a Certificate in Sustainable Tourism by the GSTC to demonstrate your knowledge of sustainable tourism standards and practices.

The intensive and interactive training is a valuable training opportunity for professionals in the fields of tourism, hospitality, destination management and marketing as well as sustainability.
